Cecilia Chung, Senior Director of Strategic Initiatives and Evaluation at Transgender Law Center, is a San Francisco Health Commissioner and an internationally recognized human rights leader who advocates for HIV/AIDS awareness and treatment access, LGBT rights and sexual and reproductive health and rights of all women.

As a trans immigrant woman living openly with HIV, Cecilia has used her personal story to inspire change when the voices from the trans communities often went unnoticed.

Prior to joining Transgender Law Center in 2005, Cecilia founded Trans March, which is now an international event. Cecilia's life story was the inspiration for one of the characters in ABC's docudrama, “When We Rise”.

Other works of Cecilia include Positively Trans, a national network of transgender people living with HIV, which has grown from 18 members in 2015 to almost 140 across the country today.
